In the last issue we announced the launching of STIFLE, the small FADER imprint label that will release selected one-offs and remixes. This time around, we are excited to announce the launch of FADER FILMS, a production division that will allow young, up-and-coming filmmakers a chance to make their small projects big. First off: early 20-something Michael Skolnik and William O'Neill, basketball aficionados who became infatuated with the story of Demetrius "Hook" Mitchell, an Oakland street legend whose promising career was sidetracked by drug addiction and petty crimes. Hooked: The Legend Of Demetrius "Hook" Mitchell premiered at the Tribeca Film Festival this May. Stay tuned for the next FADER FILMS release; it will surely rise up to the standards set by Hooked. www.hookmitchell.com
